U. S. NAVAL BASE, (Delayed) 28—(INS)—We were at a room in the submarine wardroom, somewhat smaller than the bath, but of an efficiency class.

Between slips of black coffee and thick mugs, Lt. J. H. Patterson of Orchard Lake, Mich., told his story of those grim, early days of fighting back at the hordes of Japanese with anything at hand, finding a little flock of submarines all more than 20 years old, was at Cavite on the destroyer when the war started. Patterson said, "I was wounded so I took me to a hospital. . . . Wait a minute," said one of his officers, "Six men with him in the galley deck where he was eating gunfire were killed when a bomb hit and before the left 50 of the Peary's crew were killed."

STETTINIUS MOVES TO WHITE HOUSE OFFICE FOLLOWING HIS APPOINTMENT AS UNITED NATIONS REPRESENTATIVE

By Switch, Truman Solves Presidential Succession Question

EN ROUTE TO BERLIN

Stettinius' Resignation As Secretary of State is No Surprise

By John A. Reichmann
L. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 28—(INS)—Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., planned to move today into a White House office to work at building the United Nations structure to enforce world peace whose charter he helped to draft at San Francisco.

For the moment his desk at the State Department remained vacant following his resignation as Secretary of State and appointment as United States delegate to the permanent United Nations organization. President Truman, announcing the change, promised to fill the post early next week.

By his cabinet switch, President Truman adroitly solved the vexing question of the presidential succession before he leaves for the "big three" conference in Berlin.

Regardless of whether Congress enacts his proposed legislation providing for succession by the speaker of the House, he is in a position to name, as secretary of state, a successor of political background and of his own choosing.

Speculation on a successor for the youngest man to hold the nation's highest cabinet post centered on suave, experienced James F. Byrnes. He, successively, has been a Congressman, Senator, Supreme Court Justice, Economic Stabilizer and War Mobilizer.

Stettinius' resignation was made public after an hours-long build-up as one of Mr. Truman's "most important announcements," but it came as no surprise.

Observers were convinced that Mr. Truman had told Stettinius of his plans for him at San Francisco. The change had been rumored ever since Mr. Roosevelt's death. Byrnes, who had been regarded as a candidate for the diplomatic post when Cordell Hull retired just after the election, again was the most discussed candidate.

Stettinius was made Undersecretary of State in September 1943. His previous life, beginning in Chicago in 1900, was that of a well brought up son of well-to-do parents.

TAKING HOLD

Among the various responses to the recent "Open Letter to Graduates" which appeared in these columns is the following anonymous letter:

Dear Sir:

Two weeks ago I read a letter written to the graduates entitled "Don't be a Flounder." Now, may I take the privilege and write an open letter to the townspeople and to the world? I have chosen as my title, "Where Do We Go From Here?"

On a June evening, we the members of the Class of 1945 received our diplomas. Yes, when we stepped from the platform we left our gay school life behind us and entered a new sphere. You, the adults of today, gave us a war-torn world as a commencement present, and we were to make the best of it. Now, we want to make something of ourselves and in turn make a world that our children will be proud to live in; but—now comes the catch—we can't even get a job.

All our dreams have crumbled before our eyes and only thoughts of a shaky future remain. Many of the members of our class are in the service of our country, a few are already sure of college, a few have jobs, but what about the rest of us?

A number of us yearn to go to college but financial problems keep us from fulfilling that hope. That is why we want to go to work. The answers are all the same—"we will keep your name on file," "you must be eighteen," or "inexperienced." We need to be educated while we are young and able to grasp things easily. The only way peace can be kept is through education.

Now we ask, "Where do we go from here?" Are you going to help us fulfill our dreams: jobs, college, and finally life itself? WAKE UP, YOUNG AMERICA! is the only answer to today's prayer for a peaceful world.

A GRADUATE OF '45.

This is a most interesting letter—well-written, dramatic, and setting forth eloquently much of what undoubtedly is in the minds of millions of young Americans. What to say in reply?

Volumes could be written answering some of the points which are raised.

Most obvious, of course, is that somewhere the young writer has picked up a theory of what life is about which may be alluring—but has the serious defect of not being true.

Neither in human affairs nor in nature herself has it ever been possible—or will it ever be possible—for youth to enter maturity without hardship and adjustment.

A whole series of childhood lessons appear to have been missed by "Graduate"—or, more likely, they have been learned but never applied to himself.

Except for insects and a few birds, which depend entirely on instinct, all other animal life has to work its way slowly and sometimes painfully into the responsibilities of maturity.

Who hasn't watched a cat teaching a kitten some of the things it needed to know—how to walk a fence, how to stalk its prey, how to fight back if attacked? And cuffing it soundly for lack of skill or attention.

Fledgling birds have to learn to fly—and usually take some tumbles doing it.

How much of the instinctive birthright of courage and perseverance the writer of this letter appears to have lost in fifteen years!

When he was an infant, he was entirely willing to put two solid years of persistent attention on two major jobs—learning to walk and learning to talk.

And now discouraged after two weeks looking for a job!

Adjusting oneself to life is perhaps as much a matter of learning to appreciate one's blessing as anything else. No one is more poorly adjusted than the one who sees only the hardships and the delays—who expects life forever to be just a bowl of cherries.

Only a few years ago, the young man in question would have been the exception rather than the rule had

By Gerard R. Himmelsbach
(L. N. S. Pacific Cable Editor)

Luzon, capital island of the Philippines, today was officially described as completely liberated following completion of "one of the most savage and bitterly-fought" campaigns in American history.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in a communique announcing the juncture of two victorious American forces in the heart of the Cagayan Valley of Northern Luzon, said the entire island of 40,420 square miles in area was freed. So also were its 8,000,000 or more inhabitants.

The juncture by the 11th Airborne Division paratroops and the 37th Division infantrymen secured the length of the 200-mile-long valley, site of the enemy's last-ditch stand. It climaxed a 28-day campaign in which the Japs suffered losses of at least 113,593 in counted dead and thousands of prisoners.

In addition, the graves of "many other thousands" of dead Japs were found, but not tabulated.

MacArthur placed the American losses at 3,793 dead, 34 missing and 13,381 wounded—a total of 15,178.

Darnand Arrested Near Swiss Frontier

Milan—Joseph Darnand, minister of the interior in the Vichy government and chief of the French Fascist militia during the occupations, has been arrested near the Swiss frontier, U. S. Army officials disclosed today.

Darnand was taken into custody last Monday by U. S. Fourth Army intelligence officers. The long-sought collaboratorist was discovered hiding in a farm house three miles from Edolo.

Darnand was preparing to go to Milan to keep an appointment with his secretary, Suzanne Charasse, of Vichy, at the time of his arrest.

Patriots branded Darnand one of the most ruthless of collaboratorists whose militia was savage in its opposition to resistance forces. He is charged with handing many French patriots over to the German authorities.

The collaboratorist's arrest was the result of snooping by three British sergeants, sent to investigate Darnand's reported presence. One of the sergeants obtained the clue leading to Darnand's arrest when, in the town garage, he heard a mechanic whistling a French air as he worked beneath an automobile.

The would-be mechanic admitted he was a member of the collaboratorist militia and reported Darnand's hide-out.

SLOW RECONVERSION

There can be no certainty about the manufacture of civilian goods until the probable duration of the war against Japan becomes more definite, but predictions as to individual items range from optimism to pessimism.

Some electric refrigerators will be coming off the assembly lines in sixty to ninety days. A degree of reconversion already has been accomplished in electric clocks and electric irons. Vacuum cleaners are in production and it is predicted some stores will have them in thirty days.

Gas and electric stoves, aluminum pots and pans are on the way and production in these items should be more than a trickle by fall. The washing machine situation is not so clear, but manufacturers are hopeful consumers will get some in the third quarter and more in the fourth quarter of this year.

Floor and table lamps will not be available in quantity for six months to a year. The government has stockpiled the best woods and the better grade furniture cannot be produced. Rugs and draperies will remain scarce. There is no prospect of new radio sets in the immediate future, but an effort is being made to provide more tubes for old sets.

Supplies of most of these consumer items will be inadequate for many months. Retailers advise their customers to keep an eye on household appliance departments because what they receive will be snapped up quickly.

NEED FURLOUGHS, TOO

Senator Stewart of Tennessee, returned from a military tour of Europe, has introduced a bill in the Senate making it mandatory for all service men and women who have been in the European theater for one year to be given a thirty-day furlough before being sent to the Pacific.

This has been the plan of the Army wherever possible, but the matter has been wholly discretionary. The Stewart bill would guarantee such furloughs.

The country generally will approve of the Tennessee Senator's purpose. Especially where troops have been in actual combat in Europe, it would appear that the least that could be done for them would be to give them time off before going to another war.

But the question arises in connection with this legislation as to whether corresponding steps are being taken to give some of the men in the Pacific, who have been in that area a year or more, similar respite from active military duty. It is clear that the forces in the Pacific are entitled to the same consideration that is being shown toward those in Europe.

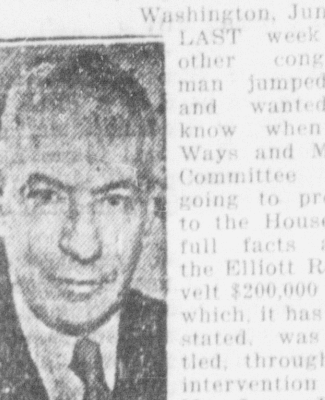

Surely the men who have fought on Iwo Jima and on Okinawa, and who are still alive, are entitled to time off before being sent against the Japs again in some new sector.

Crop forecasters, who have now scratched several million bushels off the Kansas wheat prediction, are as flighty as weather forecasters.

That $200,000 Loan

WASHINGTON, June 28.—LAST week another congressman jumped up and wanted to know when the Ways and Means Committee was going to present to the House the full facts about the Elliott Roosevelt $200,000 loan, which, it has been stated, was set, through the intervention of Mr. Jesse Jones, at the request of President Roosevelt, for 2 cents on the dollar. A day or so later still another congressman wrote to the Secretary of the Treasury asking whether Elliott Roosevelt had reported as income or in any other way the $196,000 which he was ahead as a result of the transaction. And on Monday, Mr. Westbrooke Pegler, who first printed the story, not only reiterated his charges but asserted that Elliott, aided by his father, had borrowed a lot more than the $200,000.

FROM time to time other members of the minority party in and out of Congress will call attention to this incident and reiterate the demand. But apparently these demands are going to get neither action nor information. The Ways and Means Committee is interested in the matter solely from the taxation angle as applied to Mr. Hartford, of the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, who loaned Elliott the money, and who, it is said, charged the $196,000 off his income tax as a debt due. As neither interest nor principal had been paid, it would seem that it ever there was a bad debt this was one. That, however, is what the committee wants to make sure of, and sometime this week a report from its tax expert on the subject is expected.

BEYOND that there is no expectation the committee will go, and there seems a general desire to forget the whole business. But this seems not the kind of incident that can be forgotten—or should be forgotten—for it too directly involved the late President, who was not a private individual but a public official and whose acts were properly of public concern. It has been publicly and repeatedly stated without contradiction that before the loan was made Mr. Roosevelt talked with Mr. Hartford over the telephone, called him by his first name (though he had never seen him), asked him to come see him some time in Washington and thanked him for the favor he was about to do his son. Three years later, presumably at the request of the President, Mr. Jones, then Secretary of Commerce and head of the RFC, settled the loan for $4,000. Who paid the $4,000 has not yet been disclosed.

IF these charges are allowed to stand, as they now do, without contradiction, impartial historians of Mr. Roosevelt are bound to include them in any account of his career. As they stand, they so obviously reflect discredit that it seems strange his family and friends should be willing to let them sink into the record without some sort of explanation or defense. Yet, apparently, that is what they intend to do. In the past, Elliott Roosevelt, now in this country, has been voluble, and even truculent, in issuing statements replying to members of Congress whom he thought had reflected upon him or his brothers. In the matter of the dogs which he shipped by air to his wife from Europe to California his side was fully presented by himself and his friends.

BUT in this case, while it was reported over the radio that he had engaged a lawyer to "look after his interests," he has made no public statement and has let the facts as given by Mr. Hartford about the loan, about his father's part in it and about the settlement through Mr. Jones stand without contradiction. This has left Mr. Roosevelt's friends at a disadvantage. With nothing with which to refute the charges, they fall back upon attacking Mr. Hartford. They impute self-protection and slightly sinister motives to him in making the loan and to Mr. Jones in making the settlement. They try to make it appear something akin to sacrilege to print the facts or discuss them and those who do so are described as "ghouls" and denounced as "Roosevelt haters."

NONE of this, however, is adequate or relevant. It isn't even adult. To dodge the issue and resort to abuse is not a help to the late President's reputation—rather the reverse. The way to deal with this is to prove—if it can be proved—that Mr. Hartford was a liar when he said Mr. Roosevelt thanked him on the phone for the favor he was about to do his son; and to prove that Mr. Jones never was asked by the President to settle the loan and never did settle it for 2 cents on the dollar; and to prove that the congressman who said the other day that there were other loans of this kind that have not yet come to light is also a liar. And to prove—if it can be proved—that when Mr. Pegler says there were other loans of this kind of which the President was aware—one from a man whom he later appointed to a high public office—that he is a liar, too. A real service can be done the late President by doing these things and his friends would be better employed at least in trying to do so than by calling names—and trying to ignore the whole business as though it were trivial or trumped up.

"HELEN COMES HOME"

By WATKINS F. WRIGHT

SYNOPSIS
HELEN MILLER is an attractive young woman of 20, who has been lured by a playboy, PAUL WENTWORTH, a southern plantation owner, who married ZOE NOIRIS. Helen lives in an apartment with war plant trainees. AGGIE JONES, a peasant, 30-year-old self-confessed "old maid," who urges Helen to try to mend her broken heart by dating.

PHILIP BROWNELL, foreman and manager of the war plant owned and operated by Helen's AUNT MINERVA, a shrewd business woman who drives a hard bargain and hopes to match Brownell and her niece during Philip's stay in New York on vacation.

YESTERDAY: Helen, still unable to forget Paul, cuts her evening of fun with Philip Brownell short by offering the excuse that she had detected school bonding work to do and she must get to work early in the morning. Philip, however, reveals his love for her and persuades Helen to have lunch with him the next day. At lunch Philip shows Helen a picture of his young son, whose actress mother died some years before.

CHAPTER SIX
"THE BOY'S mother was a blonde," said Philip.

"I see," said Helen. She remembered the actress wife who had run away. "How old is Dick now?"

"He'll be eight next month," Philip answered. He took the snapshot and returned it to the hillfold. Then he said: "Miss Minerva told you about—her?"

"Yes," Helen said, "she did."

"Good! I'm glad."

"Aunt Minerva always likes to get everything cleared up—out in the open."

"Not a bad idea, either."

Helen said: "I was sorry to hear you'd had an unhappy time of it, but Aunt Minerva seems to think it's all turned out for the best."

"That's what she said to me, too."

be toast, and found herself wondering just how much Aunt Minerva had told Philip Brownell about her—and her hasty retreat from Lakeville. Suddenly she wanted very much to know the truth. Like her Aunt Minerva, she wanted to get everything cleared up, out in the open.

"Aunt Minerva told you MY story?" she asked finally.

Philip looked at her, his eyes deep with understanding.

"You mean—the Paul Wentworth episode?" he said.

"That," said Helen, "is what I mean. So she did tell you?"

"Yes," said Philip. "She seems to feel that everything turned out for the best in that case also."

Helen forced a smile. "I told you she was the world's worst optimist, didn't I?"

"Aunt Minerva also feels that we have quite a bit in common," Philip added.

"Yes, so she told me," said Helen. "How do you feel about it?"

Philip wanted to know. "I mean, do you think it has all turned out for the best?"

"I'm not quite sure—yet."

"Not sure—after two years or more?"

"No," said Helen. She felt a strange urge to be perfectly honest with the man there facing her. "Having a wife walk out on you in order to go on with a career is one thing—having a man walk out on you, so that he can elope with someone else, is something else again."

"I reckon it was pretty hard to take," said Philip.

"Especially hard in a town where everyone knows you," said Helen. She leaned forward a little and talked softly. "Of course, looking back, I can see now that it was a bit on the—the melodramatic side. Girl down at church figuring how much white cheesecloth she would need to tack down the aisles—a Negro boy finding her there and delivering a note saying that the groom-elect was running off to marry someone else."

"But why in the devil did the man send a note to you there—in the church?" Philip asked.

Helen managed a smile. "A very sensible question," she said. "The boy had been told to deliver the note right away—and he finally found me at the church—making plans—dreaming dreams—wide-eyed maiden, all set to march up an aisle trailing a train and a veil."

Philip reached across the table and laid a hand over one of Helen's.

"Helen," he said, "you're sweet—darned sweet."

"Thanks," said Helen. "But don't feel that you must hand me a line—just to soothe my broken heart."

"I don't believe it's broken," Philip retorted. "And when you take into consideration the fact that Wentworth showed extreme bad judgment, it—"

"Maybe he didn't," Helen interrupted.

"At least I think so," Philip retorted. "I've seen the present Mrs. Wentworth."

"Whether or not you're handing me a line," said Helen, "you are good for my ego." She released her hand and patted the back of Philip's. "I'm beginning to think that Diana showed pretty bad judgment—leaving you and Dick for the stage."

"Thanks," said Philip. "Whether she showed bad judgment or not, there was the matter of duty—a husband, a son, a home."

"Aunt Minerva says you've made a very fine job of bringing up your boy."

"I hope she's right," Philip said. "It was pretty tough going at times—since Dick was only four years old. But we've managed. Now I've got a genuine old southern mammy to keep house for me and care for Dick, and everything seems to be running smoothly." He buttered a roll. "Mammy almost had a fit when I told her Dick would stay with Miss Minerva while I was away, and that she could have a vacation."

Helen found her heart warming more and more to the man. She could even picture him of an evening, sitting in a big chair beside an open fire, his son curled up beside him—listening to stories, asking questions.

And then she remembered that her time was limited.

"I've got to finish my dessert now," she said, "and take you up to Aggie."

"I feel," said Philip, "as though I'd known you a lot longer than it's really been. Maybe it's because of the picture."

"I feel the same way," said Helen. "And I've not had a picture to—"

"To fall in love with?"

"—to study," said Helen. "That's what I was going to say."

They lingered for a few moments over their coffee. Then they walked to the elevator.

"Sixth floor," said Helen.

"Don't think you're going to ditch me for good when we reach Aggie," Philip said. "I've only got a few days—and I'm counting on seeing you on each of them."

"I'm afraid my days are pretty well taken up," said Helen, "with the business of earning a living."

"How about your evenings?"

"That," Helen replied with a smile, "is a different matter."

"Don't you ever have a day off?" Philip asked.

"Yes—Saturdays."

"Fine! Save me this coming Saturday. I'd like to have you go out to the airport with me. They've got some Army planes out there, and I want to get a good look at them."

"I'd like to see them myself," said Helen.

"Meaning you'll go with me?"

Helen nodded. "Here's where we get off," she said. The elevator came to a stop. "Aggie's right over yonder behind those clothing racks."

Aggie saw them, and called: "Hello, there!"

"Aggie," Helen said, "here's a desperate father in search of covering for a growing son."

"You've brought him to the right place," said Aggie. "I love outfitting kids—especially the male ones. Sometimes I think I should chase the old woman who lived in the shoe off her domain and take over."

"I hope you're feeling all right today," said Philip. "How did the riveting go?"

"Splendidly!" said Aggie. "I forgot all about the cold. There must be something in what they say about all being in mind."

"Nothing is either good or bad, but thinking makes it so!" said Helen.

"Shakespeare," said Philip.

"Hamlet," said Helen.

Philip grinned and said: "Which act?"

"Good Lord," said Aggie. "You two sound like information, please! Anyway, I concentrated on a riveting machine, and lo and behold, no more sneezing."

Helen looked at her watch. "I've got to leave now," she said. "Do right by Dick, Aggie."

DON'T NEGLECT LOWER HALF OF YOUR DIGESTION

If Constipation Causes Gas, Bloating, Indigestion and Misery, That May Be a Sign Your Food Needs Help after It Leaves the Stomach

When food passes out of the stomach, most of it is only partially digested. The greater part of digestion is done in the 25 feet or more of intestines. Upon how well this lower half of your digestion works depends how regularly and satisfactorily your bowels move... how free you are from gas, bloating, and indigestion distress that may come from decaying food.

To help this lower half of digestion, try Beechams Pills. They help to get your liver bile, one of the most important digestive juices, to flowing freely. The liver bile helps to digest fats, and at the same time, to activate the bowels to relieve themselves. Then most folks start off the day with light beautiful morning feeling. Be sure to get genuine Beechams Pills, used by millions since 1842. Caution: Use only as directed. 25c.

this bullet won't care who stops it

Give the devil's weapons their due: Hitler's bullets show no prejudice... They will smack indiscriminately into the flesh of any American fighting man... be he Protestant, Catholic or Jew... whether he is Negro or White!

Ah! But Hitler has a more subtle weapon for us at home—for us civilian brothers and sisters of the armed forces: a "rumor bullet" that does discriminate between us! Speeding through America today are a series of slyly-spread rumors... plausible lies twisted cunningly to create blind prejudices... to set up differences between us... between rich and poor... between religious groups... between races... between Allies.

Why? Because Hitler would like to divide us, destroy our national unity, hamper our war effort. It's better for him than fighting battles!

Just to give you a little idea: There are hundreds of such divide-and-destroy rumors in the air. Most of them trace back to Berlin. And we, as individuals, innocently spread them from mouth to mouth!

"But what can I do about it?" you ask. Just this: Don't repeat a rumor! Never pass on a "story" if it reflects adversely on any race, any color, any creed. Simple? Yes! Effective? Guaranteed!

In the name, then, of our soldiers, sailors, marines, whether they be Protestant, Catholic or Jewish... rich or poor... Negro or White: Stop Hitler's rumors. You can do it!

Be American!

Bristol, and that she formerly resided at Mahanoy City. Her husband, according to Mrs. Levy, has applied for a divorce which she expects to be granted about July 2nd. She is the mother of three children, it is stated.

Mrs. Levy was apprehended a day or so ago on East Hanover street, Trenton, it is stated, following two days of worry and flight with a $1000 ring which she is alleged to have stolen last Friday night from Mrs. Anna Dremewick, who is staying at a Trenton hotel. The one held, and whose husband is employed in Bristol, is said to have met Sgt. Joseph Dremewick and his wife Anna at a saloon in Trenton on Friday afternoon. The Dremewicks state they invited Mrs. Levy and a soldier friend of the Dremewicks to a party in their room at the hotel. During the party Mrs. Dremewick fell asleep and she says that when she awoke her ring and "Betty" were missing.

The loss of the ring was reported by Sgt. Dremewick to police. The officers commenced their search for a "Betty." Interviewing the owners of the tavern where the Dremewicks had met "Betty" Detectives Stanley and Toff obtained her description and additional information. They also located a taxi driver who had taken "Betty" to Lancaster.

After Mrs. Levy was traced she was apprehended in Trenton. The ring, detectives state, was found rolled in a flexible cigarette case, and fastened inside her stocking just below the garter. She was charged with theft of the ring, and in default of $1000 bail was lodged in the Mercer County jail.

Four Gold Star Mothers Receive Chapter Badges

American War Mothers of Bristol Chapter gathered in the Bracken Post Home, Tuesday evening. The meeting was opened by president, Mrs. Robert Moss. With Mrs. John Fraser at the piano, the members sang "America." Chaplain, Mrs. Paul White led in prayer, paying tribute to Ralph Hermann, step-son of Mrs. Chris. Hermann, who lost his life in this war.

Birthday greetings were extended to three members. It was decided that the monthly card party is to be discontinued until September.

The Chapter received a letter from sons of two members who met in San Francisco, Cal. Albert Moss, MOMM 3/c, and William Hendrickson, Cox. These two sailors enjoyed a reunion which they had looked forward to since they entered the service.

Mrs. Charles Locke and committee will visit the Naval Hospital, Philadelphia, on July 2nd; and Valley Forge on July 18. Any mothers who care to go may contact Mrs. Locke.

A crocheted afghan was donated to the chapter by a niece of Mrs. Heath, to be contributed to a hospital. Members are making more afghans. A covered dish picnic will be held at Hulmeville Park on July 25th, members and their families being welcome.

Four Gold Star Mothers received the chapter's badges. The chapter purchased a large American flag from the American Legion Cadets. Mrs. Daniels presented a new Bible to the chapter.

Refreshments of soda and cookies were served. At the close of the meeting members participated in the flower march and had a silent prayer for sons and daughters in the service.

"Bless the Lord, O my soul." Strange, yet glorious soliloquy. A man talking to himself, and saying, Bless the Lord. This is the height to which the soul aspires; this is man at his best. When one finds himself, at those moments when thought can be turned inward, praising God, verily, he is living in Canaan.

My secret thoughts are myself. They are the revelation of myself to myself. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

O God, let me be among the number of Thy elect who can speak inwardly, and not condemn his neighbor, criticize his brother, or envy the more favored, but who, in the deep recesses of his inmost being can find himself saying: Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless His holy name. Amen.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes show there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep. When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

it been possible for him to go through high school; millions of youths elsewhere in the world can expect nothing of the sort.

In his great-grandfather's day he would have been apprenticed at an early age, and by now hard at work learning a trade the tough way.

Patience, persistence, courage and hard work are just as important now as they ever have been; there cannot be now, and in the main never will be, such a thing as success and happiness without them.

It would not do, of course, to find fault with the makings of Mother Nature. But there are times when it must seem as though mankind would have been better off had he not been born with a comfortable apparatus for sitting down!

There is such an everlasting temptation to just sit down and brood when the going gets tough!

So far as this young graduate is concerned, there never has been a time in all history when work was easier to find—not perhaps the kind he would like, nor necessarily what he wishes as a life-job; but useful, constructive work.

If he is going to give up now, and open the gates of his mind to the "something for nothing" creed which has destroyed so much of mankind in the last generation, he is building little but unhappiness for his own life.

What he needs is to get his feet on the ground and his sleeves rolled up.

If this comes hard, he may have the consolation that it is what his grandfather did in his time—and what his grandson will have to do again one day in the future.
